STUDY ABROAD IN ENGLISH

The students who want to put Germany on their resume, but don’t speak (enough of) the language, the HAW Hamburg offers courses in a wide range of subjects in English:

- International Business
- Mechanical Engineering
- Media & Film
- Nursing & Healthcare
- Nutrition & Health
- Social Work

Skills for the 21st century workplace

Today’s graduates face new challenges as they start out in an increasingly global and digital world. Employers are looking not just for academic knowledge, but for interpersonal skills such as the ability to communicate across cultures in global markets and to work well in international teams and across international borders. Prospective employees should also be confident, flexible and able to adapt easily to new situations.

Career skills gained abroad

Many students talk of the skills they acquired outside of the classroom during a study semester or year abroad. The challenges of integrating into a new culture and education system, often living on their own for the first time, builds their confidence and makes them more well-rounded students. As part of an international community they are confronted with viewpoints different to their own and being immersed in a foreign language makes them more self-aware, curious and open to new cultures.

Today’s graduates face new challenges as they start out in an increasingly global and digital world. Employers are looking not just for academic knowledge, but for interpersonal skills such as the ability to communicate across cultures in global markets and to work well in international teams and across international borders. Prospective employees should also be confident, flexible and able to adapt easily to new situations.

Career skills gained abroad

Many students talk of the skills they acquired outside of the classroom during a study semester or year abroad. The challenges of integrating into a new culture and education system, often living on their own for the first time, builds their confidence and makes them more well-rounded students. As part of an international community they are confronted with viewpoints different to their own and being immersed in a foreign language makes them more self-aware, curious and open to new cultures.

Today’s graduates face new challenges as they start out in an increasingly global and digital world. Employers are looking not just for academic knowledge, but for interpersonal skills such as the ability to communicate across cultures in global markets and to work well in international teams and across international borders. Prospective employees should also be confident, flexible and able to adapt easily to new situations.

Career skills gained abroad

Many students talk of the skills they acquired outside of the classroom during a study semester or year abroad. The challenges of integrating into a new culture and education system, often living on their own for the first time, builds their confidence and makes them more well-rounded students. As part of an international community they are confronted with viewpoints different to their own and being immersed in a foreign language makes them more self-aware, curious and open to new cultures.

Today’s graduates face new challenges as they start out in an increasingly global and digital world. Employers are looking not just for academic knowledge, but for interpersonal skills such as the ability to communicate across cultures in global markets and to work well in international teams and across international borders. Prospective employees should also be confident, flexible and able to adapt easily to new situations.

Career skills gained abroad

Many students talk of the skills they acquired outside of the classroom during a study semester or year abroad. The challenges of integrating into a new culture and education system, often living on their own for the first time, builds their confidence and makes them more well-rounded students. As part of an international community they are confronted with viewpoints different to their own and being immersed in a foreign language makes them more self-aware, curious and open to new cultures.

Today’s graduates face new challenges as they start out in an increasingly global and digital world. Employers are looking not just for academic knowledge, but for interpersonal skills such as the ability to communicate across cultures in global markets and to work well in international teams and across international borders. Prospective employees should also be confident, flexible and able to adapt easily to new situations.

Career skills gained abroad

Many students talk of the skills they acquired outside of the classroom during a study semester or year abroad. The challenges of integrating into a new culture and education system, often living on their own for the first time, builds their confidence and makes them more well-rounded students. As part of an international community they are confronted with viewpoints different to their own and being immersed in a foreign language makes them more self-aware, curious and open to new cultures.

Today’s graduates face new challenges as they start out in an increasingly global and digital world. Employers are looking not just for academic knowledge, but for interpersonal skills such as the ability to communicate across cultures in global markets and to work well in international teams and across international borders. Prospective employees should also be confident, flexible and able to adapt easily to new situations.

Career skills gained abroad

Many students talk of the skills they acquired outside of the classroom during a study semester or year abroad. The challenges of integrating into a new culture and education system, often living on their own for the first time, builds their confidence and makes them more well-rounded students. As part of an international community they are confronted with viewpoints different to their own and being immersed in a foreign language makes them more self-aware, curious and open to new cultures.

Today’s graduates face new challenges as they start out in an increasingly global and digital world. Employers are looking not just for academic knowledge, but for interpersonal skills such as the ability to communicate across cultures in global markets and to work well in international teams and across international borders. Prospective employees should also be confident, flexible and able to adapt easily to new situations.

Career skills gained abroad

Many students talk of the skills they acquired outside of the classroom during a study semester or year abroad. The challenges of integrating into a new culture and education system, often living on their own for the first time, builds their confidence and makes them more well-rounded students. As part of an international community they are confronted with viewpoints different to their own and being immersed in a foreign language makes them more self-aware, curious and open to new cultures.

Today’s graduates face new challenges as they start out in an increasingly global and digital world. Employers are looking not just for academic knowledge, but for interpersonal skills such as the ability to communicate across cultures in global markets and to work well in international teams and across international borders. Prospective employees should also be confident, flexible and able to adapt easily to new situations.

Career skills gained abroad

Many students talk of the skills they acquired outside of the classroom during a study semester or year abroad. The challenges of integrating into a new culture and education system, often living on their own for the first time, builds their confidence and makes them more well-rounded students. As part of an international community they are confronted with viewpoints different to their own and being immersed in a foreign language makes them more self-aware, curious and open to new cultures.

Today’s graduates face new challenges as they start out in an increasingly global and digital world. Employers are looking not just for academic knowledge, but for interpersonal skills such as the ability to communicate across cultures in global markets and to work well in international teams and across international borders. Prospective employees should also be confident, flexible and able to adapt easily to new situations.
21ST CENTURY WORKFORCE SKILLS

- Critical Thinking
- Communication
- Collaboration
- Creativity
- Problem-solving
- Adaptability
- Flexibility
- Leadership
- Technology skills
- Soft skills
- Emotional intelligence
- Time management
- Professionalism
- Work ethic
- Adaptability
- Flexibility
- Inter-cultural skills
- Self-awareness
- Teamwork
- Employability

A career formula

1. Work Ethic
2. Communication and Soft Skills
3. Global Exposure
4. Career Path

Intra-personal

- Personal growth
- Career development
- Personal goals

Inter-personal

- Networking
- International experiences
- Professional development

COGNITIVE

- Problem-solving
- Creativity
- Adaptability
- Leadership

INTER-PERSONAL

- Career path
- Personal goals
- Professional development

Intra-personal

- Personal growth
- Career development
- Personal goals

---

BARD KING

NICOLE PELlico

DAN BELBey

CLAUDIA KRAH